KENSINGTON PALACE

1980

My dear Prime Minister,

I write

delatedly to thank you for your kind letter. I just had to have some things dug out of my face but luckily everything went well and weren't worrying.

I was so interested to hear about your visit to the United States. I expect you surprised them no end at answering their questions in a positive way, when they are used to waffling on for hours in figures of 8, not actually answering anything.

The steel strike is depressing. I will remember when Charles Vilkin took it over. I congratulated him on his courage and he said, "I am taking on a moribund, old fashioned, out of date, uneconomical, out of date industry" and I said
"Is there any hope of improving it?"
and he said "Very little".

I suppose if one is an ordinary working man and one's union tells one not to vote for new machinery or technology because otherwise you will lose your job or your card - you just don't dare.

I went to Cambridge for a Debate (rather dull, all about the church, lots of clerics) and found them all rabid conservatives - not a Trotskyite to argue with! They were passionately against the Olympic Games in Moscow. I tried to "hit it hard on the athletes" bit but they were adamant. I suppose individuals must choose whether to go as it's up to the Olympic Committee.
If that silly boxer doesn't make a hash of it he might get Africa to Cock a snook at the Russians.

I find it quite impossible to find out What is happening in Afghanistan.

Are they about to wheel in to Iran and get all the oil? more power to your policy of nuclear power stations.

I wish they weren't called "nuclear" as people always think of the bomb.
I've been advocating them since I was 20!

many thanks for allocating £10,000 to the N.S.P.C.E. They are vital and I am President and support their free service.

with again many thanks for you letter yours very sincerely

Mam

I was very distressed to hear that you had been in hospital again and hope that all went well.

You very kindly wrote to me after your own visit to the United States which was wonderfully successful both in the admission you won and in the financial results for Covent Garden. Incidentally I went to Covent Garden on New Year's Eve and Clara Bowen was still talking of your son.

As you know, I went to the United States just before Christmas but only to Washington & New York.
I cannot help feeling that Washington is much more isolated from America than London is from Britain. Then as now I can see the hostages demanded every consideration, and understandably so. That events in Afghanistan have cast a shadow over the whole world.

If only Iran had never taken the hostages, we would now release them, we should be in a far better position to tackle the Russian threat in that part of the world. We must back America in her efforts through the United Nations but let it be felt that action on our part will make much impression on the Iranian students.

Waldheim had a dreadful loss there - worse than anyone could have anticipated. Nevertheless he would have been criticized if he hadn't tried.

In New York I spoke to the biggest luncheon ever. Some 3,000 people - and we took questions afterwards. I found it fascinating - they are so easy to please and so delighted if you say what you really think. Walter Cronkite was in the chair and he is a very skilled

Now the new year has started with a steel strike and it is difficult to see why because the two sides were really far away from one another. But after so many years of incomes policies in which people have come to expect an annual increase for nothing, it is difficult to get across the message that more money has to be earned and not- just demerited.

To-day I am just off to take the chair at 'Nuddy' - for the first time. Hardly the best moment - but we were not to know that when the meeting was fixed

All good wishes for the New Year.

I remain, your humble and devoted servant.
