

Group visit bookings calendar

The National Archives allows one official large group visit per day. A large group is defined as 16 or more people.

If your group members are predominantly first time visitors or you are likely to leave before 17:00, you are advised to plan your visit for a Wednesday, Friday or Saturday as the reading rooms are quieter on these days and staff will have more time to help with your queries.

We advise large groups not to visit The National Archives without an official booking. If you do so, you may have difficulties parking and may experience long waiting times if you require readers' tickets.

The National Archives is closed to the public on Sundays and Mondays.
