The Rev. Henry Bradford was a Baptist minister who became minister of the Princes Street Chapel, Northampton in 1882. On 17th February 1884, at the height of an election campaign when Bradlaugh, the atheist, was standing for Northampton, he preached a sermon entitled "Christian Separation from the World" urging Christians not to support an atheist. As a result he was virtually dismissed from his chapel. A number of his supporters left with him, and they began to raise funds to build a new chapel "The Union Chapel" which was situated in St. Michael's Road. Support came from all over the country, and from Christians of many denominations. The church was opened on 24th June 1886. In 1888 No. 44 Kingsley Road, Northampton "Bradford's House", was presented to the minister by his friends and congregation, who had raised the money to have it built.
